8 May 1950.

INTER-AMERICAN CONFERENCE FOR DEMOCRACY AND LIBERTY

(Havana, Cuba - May 12, 13, and 14, 1950)

25X1C

1.

2. An article appearing in the 4 May issue of LA NOVA contained the following statement reportedly issued by the American Committee for Defense of Democracy (Junta Americana de Defensa de la Democracia), sponsoring organization of subject Conference:

"The military dictators who promote the spirit of war, who awaken expansionist ideas, and who unbalance national budgets with extravagant war expenditures, sooner or later conduct the people to the fratricide of combat. For that reason, this generous democratic movement which we promote has as its essential purpose the accretion of the sentiments of brotherhood, and struggles not only for political emancipation and for democratic ideals, but also for the economic emancipation of man in America. The declaration that without social justice there can be no preservation of international peace and democratic regimes, is a truth already demonstrated by the reality of history. We condemn all forms of capitalistic exploitation and imperialistic infiltration with the same energy that we combat the preachments of Communism which wishes to reduce man to a dull mechanism in the monstrous machinery of a state without moral conscience. The exploited or oppressed men of all the countries of the continent should, in the final analysis, be the reason for the struggle for social and political redemption in which all authentically democratic forces are engaged."

3. The newspaper article continued with the statement that a large group of Panamanian intellectuals would represent Panama at subject conference, and that the following are among those invited:

✓ José N. LASSO de la Vega ✓
 ✓ Diogenes de la ROSA
 Clara Gonzales de REHRINGER
 Miguel Angel ORDÓÑEZ
